ARBOUR PARK, TEMPE, ARIZONA

This 288-unit extended-stay hotel complex uses ordinary materials to achieve a very unusual whole. Stucco, concrete roofing tiles, aluminum windows and rough sawn lumber are used to define a series of forms which are energized by the Arizon sun. Nine principal buildings are carefully placed to define a series of clear and strong entries to various public spaces. The careful organization of the site plan led the City of Tempe to approve a density of 29 units per acre, the highest in the city's history.
