MURPHY DESMOND, MADISON, WISCONSIN

As one of the anchor tenants of the newest most high profile office building in Madison, Murphy Desmond wanted their space to look like an extension of the building itself. They also wanted the design to be inspired by the geographical character of southwestern Wisconsin, with its highly sculptural landforms and distinctive rocky escarpments and outcroppings. We responded with extensive use of the same stone found in the public areas and exterior of the building and with native hickory wood paneling, strategically employed for powerful impact.
