EBAY CUSTOMER CONTACT CENTER, VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA

The heart of eBay is finding people who find value in things that other people no longer need. Guided by this ethic, the main design direction is built around commodities— materials produced in large volume at low cost - and recycled products. The carpet contains recycled tires, the basic component of the ceiling tiles is recycled slag from the process of steel production, and the tectum panels which surround the conference rooms are principally made of recycled wood. To meet the needs of one of the fastest growing public companies in America, the 75,000 square foot customer care center was completed in 4 short months.
